1) LEVOIT Air Purifiers for Large Home Bedroom 166m², CADR 400m³/h (£175.97) This is the closest value-for-money step down from the main LEVOIT. Compared with the 697m³/h model, it's less powerful and not as suitable for very large open-plan spaces, but it still offers solid coverage for medium-to-large UK rooms and most bedrooms or living rooms. What's better: it's much cheaper, still has Alexa support, a PM2.5 sensor, and auto mode. What's worse: lower CADR means slower air cleaning in bigger rooms, so it won't clear smoke or heavy pollen loads as quickly. Choose this if you want smart features and decent performance without paying flagship prices.

2) Levoit Smart HEPA Air Purifier for Bedroom Home 1120 Sq Ft, Vital 100S (£169.99) This is a better fit if your priority is a bedroom, nursery, or a medium-sized living room rather than a huge family space. It compares well on features: washable pre-filter, air quality and light sensor, pet mode, and strong HEPA filtration for dust, pollen, and smoke. What's better: it's cheaper, more compact, and easier to live with in everyday use. What's worse: it lacks the brute-force airflow of the main model, so it's not the one to buy for large open-plan flats or homes with persistent odour or smoke issues. In the UK, it's a smart pick for hay fever season and general year-round allergen control.

3) WINIX 5500-2 Air Purifier for Home Bedroom, CADR 390m³/h (£147.00) WINIX is a strong alternative for people who care more about filtration quality than app-based bells and whistles. Compared with the main LEVOIT, it has far less coverage and no Alexa/app ecosystem, but it still brings proper HEPA plus carbon filtration and a respectable CADR for bedrooms and medium rooms. What's better: it's cheaper, well-regarded for odours and everyday allergens, and often a good fit for homes with pets or cooking smells. What's worse: it's not as smart, not as powerful, and not ideal for very large UK living spaces. Choose this if you want a dependable purifier that gets on with the job.

4) Levoit Smart HEPA Air Purifier for bedroom home 108 m², Core 300S (£127.48) This is the budget-friendly smart option. Against the main LEVOIT, it gives up a lot of raw room coverage and airflow, but it keeps the useful extras: laser air quality sensing, app and Alexa control, auto/sleep modes, and 99.97% particle capture. What's better: it's the cheapest smart model here and a good match for a bedroom, office, or smaller lounge. What's worse: it's not designed for large rooms, and in damp UK homes with mould spores or during peak pollen days, it may feel underpowered if you expect whole-room purification. Pick this if you want smart control on a tighter budget.

5) LEVOIT Core 300-RF Genuine Replacement Filter (£29.99) This isn't a purifier, but it's worth mentioning because many people searching for alternatives are actually trying to reduce running costs. If you already own a compatible Core 300/Core 300S, replacing the filter is far cheaper than buying a new machine. What's better: it restores performance, maintains HEPA-level filtration, and keeps ongoing costs down. What's worse: it only helps if you already have the compatible purifier. For UK households that run their purifier heavily during spring pollen or winter mould season, a fresh filter can make a big difference.

Overall, the main LEVOIT remains the best choice if you need maximum airflow for a very large room, open-plan home, or frequent smoke/odour control. But for most UK bedrooms and medium living rooms, one of these alternatives will do the job for less money.

Still Buy the Original If...

Buy the original if you need top-end CADR for a large open-plan space, want faster air changes, or are dealing with heavier pollen, smoke, or pet load. It's the best pick when performance matters more than price.
